

FORTY-NINE LOST WHEN TWO STEAMERS COLLIDE IN FOG EARLY THIS MORNING

TWENTY-FIVE PASSENGERS AND TWENTY-FOUR OF CREW LOSE THEIR LIVES.

"MONROE" GOES DOWN

Stricken Vessel Went Down Within Ten Minutes of the Accident—Details Are Meagre of Disaster.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 30.—Forty-nine lives were lost in the icy waters of the Atlantic today when the Old Dominion liner, Monroe, was rammed amidships, practically cut in two and sunk within ten minutes twenty miles southeast of Hog Island by the merchant ship, the liner Nantucket.

The forty-nine lost comprise twenty-five passengers and twenty-four members of the crew, according to official wireless reports to the Old Dominion line here. Thirty passengers and fifty-five of the crew were saved, making the list of the rescued eighty-five.

Officers Saved.

Capt. Johnson of the sunken Monroe and all his officers but one, were among the saved. The chief officer was Second Engineer Gateley.

Eighty-six survivors rescued from the sea and huddled on the Nantucket, which was towed toward Norfolk today, are the only ones who know all the story of how the two big ships, picking their way through a blanket of fog, bounded on at the other, bound south, met with a crash near the Winter Quarter shoal life ships. S. O. S. calls reaching out to the coast stations started every available agency of rescue, but not soon enough. While the Nantucket backed off, lowered boats and began sweeping the misty sea with her search lights, the Monroe, her passengers, picked up of her in night clothes, sank like a plummet.

In the swirling vortex of the sinking ship, men shouted and women screamed through the mist. The Monroe was a quick ship, that there was little time for launching boats and it is believed the only refugees were those saved at once by the Nantucket.

The passengers' list of the Monroe follows: Mrs. W. L. Balton, Newark, N. J.; E. G. Brown, New York; H. Budwig, New York; W. C. Calhoun, Milwaukee; E. J. Newby, New York; S. A. P. Davis, Brooklyn; C. H. Davis, New York; J. Edwards, U. S. N.; R. E. Flanagan, Brooklyn; E. G. Groman, Philadelphia; Mrs. D. Gibson, New York; J. Haskel, Portland, Me.; Mrs. E. J. Okamoto, Japanese; James O'Connell, Washington, D. C.; C. W. Pool and wife, Gray, Virginia; L. F. Ray and wife, New York; Charles Roling and wife, Lawrenceville, Va.; Miss Seville, Macaria Theatrical Company; W. Snyder, New York; Mr. Tillet, Macaria Theatrical Company; Mr. Kern, Macaria Theatrical Company; R. Van Winkle, Nutley, N. J.; Mrs. T. J. Norfolk, Wagner, O.; U. S. Marine Corps; G. Williamson, New York; J. Williamson, New York; G. Williamson, New York.

A New Boat.

The Monroe was built at Newport News, Va., in 1909. She was of 4,704 gross and 2,896 net tonnage. Her length was 345 feet, nine inches, 46 feet and 2 inches beam, 28 feet 8 inches deep. She was commanded by Capt. E. E. Johnson, Guy Henley, first officer, J. E. Gateley, second officer, and John Perkins, chief engineer. Captain Johnson is reported among the rescued.

The Monroe had a capacity of 243 first and second cabin passengers. She usually carried a crew of 100. Capt. Johnson explained, there was always a slump in the passenger traffic, accounting for the small number aboard at the time of the accident.

The property loss, Captain Johnson thought, would be about $255,000, exclusive of the freight carried and baggage of passengers and crew.

Nantucket Damaged.

Baltimore, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Captain Berry reported the Nantucket was being conveyed by the steamship Hamilton, but she was proceeding slowly and expected to reach Norfolk about 1:00 o'clock this afternoon. The Nantucket was damaged in the bow, Captain Berry added but he gave no information about the disaster beyond saying that he had "about 85 people from the Monroe on board."

Had No Chance.

The lost had scarcely a chance to realize that death was upon them before they were struggling in the sea.

The doomed passengers of the Monroe, fast asleep in their cabins when the two vessels came together, went down to death with only time for a shout of despair.

Both vessels had quieted down for the night, hours before the collision. Capt. Berry on the bridge of the Nantucket and the slowly pacing lookout had the dead ship, the Monroe, as the vessel skimmed through the fog and mist. Capt. Johnson kept the ship holding all but lookouts and officers and the two vessels neared each other in the murk.

The Rescue.

As the Nantucket staggered back after the wreck, Captain Berry swung out his searchlight and dimly the bulk of the settling Monroe loomed up through the fog.

Uncertain as to the fate of his own vessel, he ordered the life boats lost from view in the fog, they began

POPE WILL SETTLE SERVIAN QUESTION

Pope Pius Has Difficult Problem in Settling Political Trouble Caused by Balkan Wars.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Rome, Jan. 30.—Pope Pius is again in troubled waters as a result of European politics. Serbia, whose territory has been doubled as a result of the two recent Balkan wars, has just sent to Rome a commission to negotiate with the Vatican. Personal to the Pope is most favorably disposed toward Serbia. Austria, however, which is the Vatican's strongest friend against the big European powers, has for the past century been trying to crush the little state that is always trying to create a big Slav empire on her southern border. Austria also enjoys from the Vatican the position of protector of the Catholic church in the entire Balkan peninsula. She has lodged an emphatic protest with the Pope against this diminution of her power and the increase of that of Serbia which would result from a concordat with the Vatican. Pope Pius gives no indication of just how he is going to get out of the difficult position.

General Francisco Villa, as military commander-in-chief, directed the disposition of the troops with the intention of personally directing the attack toward Torreón.

RECENT DEATHS CAUSED BY TRICHINOSIS START FROM EATING RAW PORK

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Jan. 30.—There is great danger in eating raw or partially cooked pork and pork products, particularly at this time of year according to a statement today by University of Wisconsin experts. No less than 28 cases of trichinosis in five Wisconsin families have been reported and two of these have resulted fatally.

Trichinosis is caused by very small parasitic worms which bury themselves in the flesh of diseased hogs. When infected pork is eaten, the worms are liberated in the stomach and intestines. In about ten days they are in the blood and migrate to the muscles of the human body where they cause serious disorders and great pain.

Once the parasite has obtained a hold in the muscles, the best treatment will expel the worms from the body, according to Dr. B. F. Hadley of the University. When the disease is recognized in an early stage, relief is possible by the use of purgative medicines.

As heat kills the worms, thoroughly cooked pork can be eaten without danger," said Dr. Hadley. "In order to avoid trichinosis however the following rules should be adhered to: Cook all raw pork either in the form of sausage or ham.

(Pork products cured by drying in the air (summer sausage) preserved with salt (salt pork) or preserved by smoking (bacon, etc.) also should be used with greatest care.

SELF CONVICTED MURDERER HANGS AT COLUMBUS TODAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Columbus, O., Jan. 30.—Leslie Humphreys, Columbus murderer, will be electrocuted at the Ohio penitentiary tonight, without a hearing. Humphreys is a self convicted murderer. He pleaded guilty to the general charge of homicide and waived his right to a trial, hoping for leniency from the court. Because of the nature of his crime, the judge gave him the limit of the law. Humphreys gained the confidence of a comrade and learned where this friend had $400 hidden. He got his victim to get the money, lured him from West Virginia to Columbus, took him to a deserted part of the city, and cut his throat. He shot the man afterwards to make sure of the job. Then Humphreys fled back to the West Virginia mountains, abandoning his friend and his babies. It was through his own little boy that the crime was finally fastened upon Humphreys. A few days after the murder the child found a bloody revolver in an old stove in the kitchen. The police were notified and Humphreys finally captured. Confronted with several of the murdered man's belongings found in his possession, Humphreys broke down and confessed.

CLAIMS GOMPERS WAS "GLORIOUSLY DRUNK" AT SEATTLE MEETING

McDonald Makes Sensational Charges Against Union President at Indianapolis Convention.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Indianapolis, Jan. 30.—That Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor was "gloriously drunk" at the Seattle convention of the federation was the charge made by Donald J. McDonald at the convention of the United Mine Workers of America today. During the prolonged cheers, "lar" and "slanderers" were hurled at McDonald by Gompers who sat on the platform.

"I am glad Mr. Gompers is here so I can say what I want to," said McDonald in beginning his reply to the speech made yesterday by Mr. Gompers. "I said there were 'hooray fighters' in charge of the American Federation of Labor and I'll prove it. At the Seattle convention I had a room with my wife at a hotel next to the room where the resolutions committee met. The first Saturday night we could not sleep by the noise made by a bunch of drunks in the next room."

"I appealed to the clerk and the next morning I went down to the hotel office and the night manager called Jim Duncan on the phone and told him they would have to get out of the room, they were disturbing everybody."

"The noise grew fiercer and I finally knocked on the door of the room and was asked to come in and have a drink. When the door was opened there sat Sam Gompers, now lead of the table gloriously drunk with a bottle in his hand."

The statement threw the convention in an uproar and it was some time before order was restored. While the confusion was at its height Gompers called McDonald a liar and a slanderer.

PROGRESSIVES GAIN STRENGTH IN WEST

Registration Race Shows New Party Overcoming Republican Lead in California.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 30.—Governor Hiram Johnson was jubilant today over the strength shown by the Progressive party in the 1914 registration race. Although the Republicans so far have been in the lead, the governor expressed confidence that his party will overcome this difference before the registration books close on May 27.

Up to date the Republicans have shown the greatest strength in Los Angeles and San Diego. In each place they had the Progressive by about 1,000 voters. In San Francisco the Republicans are about 400 ahead, and the Democrats about half a hundred. Seventeen centers of population recently showed the Republican registration vote to be 7,000, Progressives 7,125 and Democrats 5,426.

"The figures show," said Governor Johnson, today, "a phenomenal registration of progressives. Here is a new party that in a few days registers almost 2,000 more members than one of the old parties, and 2,600 less than the other old party. The present registration represents only about one-third of the total vote."

When it is understood that registration does not mean voting strength, the figures are very impressive. Most of the people register from force of habit or tradition, the enrollment of the California Progressive party is nothing less than astonishing. The Republicans and the Democrats have already shown how they fear the results by their present activities. On the other hand, the Progressive party has not done one-half the work that the other parties have done and they have shown better results."

CHURCH WILL FAIL IF SOCIAL SERVICE IS ONLY FUNCTION

Bishop Webb in Address at Country Life Conference Urges Need of Religion in Rural Districts.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—The institutional church, it leads away from spiritual functions, found criticism by Bishop W. W. Webb, Milwaukee, of the Episcopal denomination, before the Wisconsin Country Life Conference this morning. His subject was "The Social Response of the Rural Parish." He declared that philanthropy and social service "do not and cannot take the place of religion."

"It would be the last to advocate the rural church giving itself up to mere social betterment," he said. "The city church that has been overthrown to institutionalism has usually found out it was a mistake; in some directions there is a strong reaction, a feeling that it has been overdone. The church is first and foremost a house of God, a place where religious truth is taught to man. He is only under proper social conditions that the best spiritual work can be done, and so a social responsibility rests on the church as on the city parish."

"The tendency for the young men or the young women to go to the village or city to work in the mill or the office, rather than on the farm, is being explored. The rural population constitute the true backbone of the nation."

Souls Most Important.

An alive pastor, without a hall or even a hall of prayer, will take the trouble to care more for the social uplift and the betterment of his people than almost anyone else. First and foremost his work undoubtedly is to save souls. On the other hand, his specialty, but he is a pastor, a pastor if he ends there. I am convinced that the more he plans and does to meet the social responsibility of his parish, rural or urban, provided he does not forget his first and best work, the more he will be likely to save souls."

W. H. Bridgman gave an analysis of the business of a small city (Shelby, Wis.). He said the most important factors in the relations of the city people with those of the surrounding country are the schools and the churches. Practically all of the church affiliations of the 6,000 or 7,000 people of Stanley, and the Stanley country, with the exception of perhaps 500, are with church organizations. He said that the churches that the churches which include the European, immigrant class are the most prosperous and active in their work.

Farm Help Problem.

A proper appreciation of the fact that hired help are human will go far to keep them on the farm, in the opinion of Mrs. George Carpenter, wife of the Assemblyman from Baraboo, addressing the Wisconsin Country Life Conference this afternoon on "The Problem of Hired Help on the Farm from the Standpoint of the Country School."

On the farm, the farmer needs are employees who have remained ten and twelve years. Confidence and respect for hired help are needed to make them work to their employers' interest.

Mrs. Carpenter expressed the view that the drift of young people from the farm to the city is due to the system of education.

"The city board of education bids for our farmers' boys and girls to fill their schools and never return us one educated farmer," she declared. They must change their course of study to meet the requirements of the country student if they want to draw on the country to fill their high schools. The average farmer makes no effort to provide any special instruction of his children, but he tries to prepare them for the work of the farm and the home."

Mrs. Carpenter advocated consolidation of country schools and the instruction of the farm life in the grading occupation compared with a professional calling.

Country Y. M. C. A. Work.

The part of the country Y. M. C. A. movement in rendering social service was related by L. A. Markham of Janesville, secretary of the Rock county association. This movement he said now reaches 2,012 boys between 12 and 20 years of age in 109 country or towns of less than 3,000 population. As only 40 per cent of these were in schools and less than that number in churches, the first duty was to bring them into the Y. M. C. A. leaders where the spirit of service could be drilled into the boys by teaching and example. The results, he said, have been a development of leadership, the boys have been interested in questions relating to their farm life, a development of community spirit, and a greater willingness on the part of boys to take responsibility. This movement has started in Wisconsin only two years ago, and is now organized in four counties.

Rev. W. J. Warner of Windsor told how his village enlisted the interest of the community in a social and cultural lasting two days. A paper, The Neighborhood Herald, was published, and entertainment included a plowing contest, school children's exercises, a parade and sports, church dinners, and exhibits of many kinds.

TRUST LEGISLATION SUBJECT OF HEARING

COMMERCE COMMITTEE BEGINS ITS EXHAUSTIVE INVESTIGATION TODAY.

REPORT ON TREATIES

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Recommends Ratification of General Arbitration Pact.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Jan. 30.—Hearings on proposed trust legislation embracing President Wilson's recommendations for trust reform were begun today by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. While the committee had only the interstate trade commission before it, in printed form, Chairman Adamson said information would be sought on general subjects including the proposed railways securities bill and other phases of the trust question.

Davies Wants Hearing.

Commissioner Davies of the bureau of corporations, Representative Clayton, chairman of the judiciary committee, and Louis D. Brandeis of Boston had requested to be heard today. Chairman Adamson explained that the draft of the trade commission bill was only tentative.

A long list of witnesses has been prepared.

The senate foreign relations committee today voted to recommend immediate ratification of general arbitration treaties with Great Britain, Japan and other nations, twenty-five treaties in all. These have been pending since last summer when their original five-year limitations expired.

The vote in favor of the treaties was 11 to 2, with four senators' abstentions. Senator O'Gorman, democrat, New York, and William Alden Smith, republican, of Michigan, voted in the negative.

Affirmative Vote.

Affirmative votes were cast by Senators Bacon, Stone, Hitchcock, Williams, Swanson, Pomerene, and Smith of Arizona, democrats; Lodge, Root and McCumber, republicans; Clark of Arkansas, Borah, Sutherland and Burton, republicans, that they favored re-ratification of the treaties.

Speaker Clark declared today that nothing in his opening speech last night could be considered as indicating he had figured on being a presidential candidate in 1916, or any time in the future.

"The only thing I said about the presidency," said the speaker, "was in reply to a long, flowery introduction of the postmaster. I said that if all that the postmaster said were true ought to be to the president today and would if the proposed primary had been in force in 1912. I praised President Wilson's handling of the Mexican situation. I also praised President Taft and President Wilson, too, keeping us out of war with Mexico."

Clark's Baltimore Speech.

Speaker Clark declared today that nothing in his opening speech last night could be considered as indicating he had figured on being a presidential candidate in 1916, or any time in the future.

GIVE PHONE GIRLS TEN SECOND LIMIT TO ANSWER CALLS

State Railway Commission Issues New Ruling for the Telephone Companies.

Janesville telephone users will be interested in the question are your telephone calls answered in ten seconds or less? If they are, then you are getting reasonably prompt service. If you are not, then register your kick. This is the advice given telephone subscribers by the Wisconsin railroad commission in tentative rules for the betterment of telephone service which will be discussed before the commission at Madison on Feb. 12.

In these rules, the commission says that telephone companies should encourage subscribers to make complaints by designating some one official to whom the complaints should be registered.

Response in Ten Seconds.

The commission says that in all exchanges of 500 subscribers the service should not be considered adequate if the tests do not show that at least 94 per cent of the calls are not responded to within ten seconds of the summons of the subscriber. The more important rules follow:

1.—That all lines of the company shall be so constructed and equipped as to eliminate as far as possible all cross talk and objectionable noises on the line.

2.—That on all new construction no more than ten subscribers shall be connected to any one line having a length of ten miles more or less.

3.—That every telephone line between two or more towns shall maintain at least one line for through traffic, and that such line shall be segregated for such through traffic if the business demands such lines, the number to be sufficient to at all times care for the through traffic business.

Keep Modern Equipment.

4.—That all telephone companies shall be required to make such tests at frequent intervals to ascertain that its lines, instruments and other equipment are in perfect order, the frequency of the tests to be proportionate to the traffic.

5.—That each telephone exchange shall be required to furnish switchboard facilities according to modern standards.

6.—That good emergency facilities be provided so that in cases of failure of power, failure of lighting service, or other emergencies, prompt recourse can be had to such emergency service and the traffic thus saved from serious interruption.

Security from Operator.

7.—That any telephone exchange serving more than 500 subscribers shall be considered as giving reasonably prompt service if 94 per cent of the calls are answered in ten seconds or less. All other regular telephone exchanges should answer at least 90 per cent of the calls within this period. Where the traffic is insufficient to require the entire attention of an operator, and the exchange is operated in connection with other work, slower service may be adequate. The operators should follow up calls with reasonable care and should disconnect the service promptly after the calls are completed.

8.—That every exchange shall have rules ensuring proper and courteous phraseology in the answer of operators.

9.—That in general secrecy shall be imposed on operators as to the messages passing over their lines.

10.—That all telephone directories of exchange serving over 1,500 subscribers shall be revised semi-annually and that the directories of all other exchanges should be revised at least once each year.

11.—That every telephone utility shall publish in its directory or otherwise all local rates in force together with such instructions as may be necessary to inform subscribers of the action they should take in order to obtain efficient and adequate telephone service from its system.

12.—That rules governing toll service together with rates to nearby exchanges shall be posted in all pay stations and printed in all directories.

13.—That every exchange shall maintain a record showing all complaints, interruptions or irregularities of service, with the date and time the trouble is reported, the nature of each complaint or irregularity, the duration of the same and the action taken. All reasonable effort should be made to eliminate interruptions or irregularities and to promptly take care of all those which arise.

14.—In order to facilitate the enforcing of the standards, each telephone utility shall file with the commission the name and address of the official or employee with whom service complaints and irregularities shall be taken up in the first instance, and careful attention to the trouble so reported. Each utility shall also file with the commission a map of its system and keep a similar map at the principal office, revised and up to date. The commission shall also be kept supplied with each edition of the directory as issued.

RECALLS THE DAYS OF STAGE COACHES OF PIONEER DAYS

Byron Campbell of Evansville Tells of Early Days and Drivers Between Janesville and Madison.

Of course there are isolated communities in various parts of the country where stage coaches still make day trips, but the rails of iron now travel the earth with such a new work and Uncle Sam and his rural mail deliveries handle the mail so their usefulness is past. In a Denver dispatch of recent date it was announced that the old stage coach of pioneer days in the west, the famous Deadwood coach, long a feature with Buffalo Bills, will west to be sold at auction. Almost everyone has seen this coach, modeled after those of the days of steam travel and the idea of the coaching days is built upon that.

Byron Campbell, of Evansville, however, brings the coaching days of Janesville and Madison right home to us in the following article which was published in the Evansville Review. It is most interesting and few present residents know of the coaching days of the past.

I have been asked to write something about the early stage days, the days of travel, the days of stage coaches carrying passengers and mail between Madison and Janesville.

The first tavern was built in Janesville by Mr. Stevens. He was the first tavern keeper and his house was called by his name. It was also called the "stage house." The stage left there every morning for Madison, north of the city.

At first the stage coach made the trip daily. Then as the business grew two coaches went each way. This stage line was owned by Frank and Walker.

The stage leaving Janesville for Madison, striking the road, the main road one mile east of Leyden. Later the road was changed so the stages went out of Janesville four miles north of Henry. Justin Dayton built a tavern called the Dayton House, or the "Rock River House."

The Leyden was the first stop to change the mail. The tavern here was built by Ben McMullen in 1841. The next stop was the Dayton tavern, built in 1842. There was a Lewellows now lives, John Winston opened a tavern in 1843.

Half mile west of Warren's on the road, the stage was changed by Wm. Stevens. The postoffice was moved from Warren's to this place.

The next stop was the "Ball Tavern," so called because of a round hung from the limb of an oak tree outside of the house—a round wooden ball about the size of a man's head. This tavern was built by a Mr. Osborn.

From there the road ran diagonally to the north. Evansville was not on the map at that time, but one mile before coming into Union, there was a log house built and kept by Chas. McMullen on the farm now owned by the O'Gorensens. This was not a postoffice.

At the village of Union the tavern was built by a Mr. Prentice in 1844 and kept by him for some little time, but later by Dan Pond. Union was the last little burg in those days. Just think of the coaches loaded with passengers stopping here for dinner! And as this was the half-way house, they changed horses.

These stage coaches ran on scheduled time and as prompt as the express trains of today. I think one of the first and oldest drivers was Noy Smith, who lived in Union. Then there were Martin Warren, Briggs, Ed. Lovejoy, Joshua Nathan and Thomas Lee, or "Tommy," who drove for a while.

He was a good driver, but a hard one, and it was a bad day when he did not come in on time. When the drivers came within about one hundred rods, a postoffice let people know they were coming and for them to clear the way.

After leaving Union, the first stop was Rutland, where Rutland house was built and kept by John Waterman and was one of the early taverns along this line. There was one tavern that kept a few groceries on those days at the bar room. In one day a man came in and whiskey. They had any crackers to sell; they had, so he took a bag. When they put up, he asked if he could not change for a drink, as he had changed his mind. They said yes, that was all right. He drank the whiskey and started out. On being asked to pay for the whiskey for it, then the stagekeeper wanted the pay for the crackers and the man replied, "Why, you have the crackers!"

After leaving Rutland the next stop was Rome Corners, later known as Oregon. This tavern there was kept by C. P. Foster. It was built by him in 1843. From Rome Corners the stages went up the way of Oak Hall, later by Lake View. The stage was kept by Wm. Quiver in Oak Hall, kept by him in connection with the postoffice. The next stop was Madison.

WOODMEN CAMP HAS ROLL CALL PROGRAM

Members of Florence Camp Enjoy Festivities at Lodge Rooms Last Evening.

The first roll call ceremonies in the history of the Florence Camp Number 366 of the Modern Woodmen of America, held last night, proved a great success, one hundred and forty-two members responding to their names and forty Royal Neighbors and over one hundred guests being present at the ceremonies.

A. M. Church presided at the meeting, and after a short address read a short poem on Woodmen spirit. The opening ode was sung by the entire camp and the Ruridick orchestra of the Janesville high school gave a selection. The principal address of the evening was given by F. P. Starr, who related the rise of the organization and interpreted his address with pointed humorous stories. The following selections were then given: Piano and Violin Selection—Clarence and Carl Foster.

Cornet Selection—Jones; Piano Selection—Mrs. S. Richards; Piano Duet—Lyle Boyes and Theodore Ackerson.

Piano Selection—Mrs. Frank Vosburg.

Reminiscences were given by Neighbors H. G. Arnold, who is the oldest living member in the Janesville camp. One of the most amusing incidents of the evening was an exhibition by the silent quartet, who gave an imitation of singing grand opera without music. The quartet was captured by E. L. Webster. The play was captured by a recitation by Miss Bernice Drake and selected by the orchestra. After the program dancing was enjoyed and refreshments served.

The Monroeville boys made the score down to 10-12, but the Cardinals closed the game on a low point making the close of the game the most exciting that has been seen scheduled at the Monroe court this year.

For the Cardinals, Colletine, the speedy guard, kept the Janesville boys busy, and by leading the ball to the forward resulted in the call of the foul. The Janesville boys, Tillie, the small forward, and the big center, the named Alabman from Albany, played a stellar game at forward. For Janesville, the coach lead his team-mates with three baskets, and one of them being from the middle of the floor. The shot brought the crowd to its feet. The crowd was a large crowd present to see the game. Both shots went through the basket without touching the rim. Falter, at center, proved a fast floor man in the game, while Blunk and Brown gave the opponents a chase in getting baskets.

THE INCOME TAX.

People all over the country are wrestling just now with the income tax problem, and Wisconsin people are treated to a double dose. The blanks furnished by the state are as clear as mud, and as inquisitorial as a cross examination in a murder trial. They demand not only a detailed statement of what the victim made, but also how he spent it.

Three lawyers figured on one of these blanks for a day and then took it to a banker for solution. The banker said, "You can search me. I made out five for customers, and all have been returned as incorrect. The federal blanks, having to do with business and corporations, are no better. It will be noticed that the five thousand dollar exemption has been eliminated. This is done to catch the small dealer with a very moderate income. No guilty man can escape. One of the inconsistencies of the federal law is pointed out by a financial journal, which says:

"When a husband and wife each have taxable incomes, how much exemption can they claim? The treasury department rules that when living together they can claim $4,000 between them. If living separate, each can claim $3,000. Paragraph C of the law says:

"There shall be deducted from the amount of the net income of each of said persons, ascertained as provided herein, the sum of $3,000, plus $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a married man with a wife living with him, or plus the sum of $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a married woman with a husband living with her; but in no event shall this additional exemption of $1,000 be deducted by both husband and wife. Provided, that only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of both husband and wife when living together."

"It may be the framers of this bizarre or futuristic piece of legislation had in mind exactly what the department has ruled. But they did not say it. Read the whole paragraph together and it is a flat contradiction of itself. The intent of the law-makers is not clearly apparent. Their effort ends in an absurdity.

"But the courts have established rules for the interpretation of statutes. They give words their most natural and obvious meaning. And when a proviso or saving clause is so repugnant to the purview of the statute that the whole cannot be taken together, they will reject the proviso.

"Read this paragraph down to the proviso, and its meaning seems clear. It gives an exemption of $3,000 to every person, male or female, married or single. And as a compensation for the extra expense of maintaining a home, the law gives an additional thousand dollars to a married couple living together. This is in the line with the policy of our law which has always sought to encourage marriage and the family life.

"From the revenue point of view, the treasury ruling is favorable to the government. But it penalizes the very institution the state has always been most solicitous to uphold. This proviso seems not only repugnant to the purview of the statute, but repugnant to morality, and therefore, might well be eliminated."

If the tariff was a tax it was so evenly distributed that it was not burdensome. The federal income tax is supposed to make good the loss from tariff revenue, but it is class legislation, and the burden falls on people already taxed to the limit of endurance, and many of them regulated to the verge of bankruptcy.

The Wisconsin income tax law never should have been enacted and should be repealed by the next legislature. Its only object was to get more money, by whipping the devil around the post. The issues of the next state campaign are clearly defined. They are not political because money is important. The taxpayers of the state are the victims of extravagance and recklessness on the part of their public servants. The next campaign will determine whether or not these conditions shall continue. That is the one and only issue.

NOT POLITICAL, NOT RELIGIOUS.
Political rather than religious significance is attached by officers of foreign mission organizations to the action of the Chinese administrative council on Thursday prescribing the worship of Heaven and Confucius by the president of the republic. The news from Peking caused regret that Confucianism should receive state recognition, but no alarm for the prosperity of the missions maintained by the American churches in China. American missionaries regret the dissolution of the Chinese parliament and the recent monarchical tendencies shown by President Yuan Shi Kai, but they retain confidence in repeated assurances that the president has given of his friendliness toward the Christian religion. Recent letters received at various headquarters from Christian workers in the Chinese field testified to this belief.

Missionary workers will recall that the Chinese provisional constitution demanded religious freedom, and they agreed that this move by the administrative council, which Yuan Shi Kai, they hear, practically controls, indicated reactionary tendencies. In a recent report to the state department the American charge d'affaires at Peking took this same view. He pointed out that the revolution which established the republic discredited Confucianism because it was associated with the old order. At that time Confucian temples were destroyed or turned to secular uses.

Foremost in the movement to restore Confucianism was Dr. Chen Huan Chang, who has the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia university. He is remembered as one of the brightest Chinese that ever attended Columbia and his influence in China has been marked. As the head of a company of Chinese scholars, he did his best to have Confucianism designated as the state religion without, however, depriving the people of religious liberty.

EUGENIC MARRIAGE LAW.
Interest throughout the country has been shown in the workings of the Wisconsin marriage law as enacted by the last legislature and now in force in the state. The Journal of the American Medical association believes its effect should be a warning to state legislatures not to enact hasty and ill-considered laws on complex scientific subjects.

"The discussion of eugenics, race betterment and marriage regulation is productive of a large amount of good, but premature efforts to crystallize hastily formed opinions into laws can result only in confusion and defeat."

The apparent deadlock in Wisconsin over the amendment to the marriage law requiring a physician's certificate as a condition for a marriage license has been broken for the present at least, by the decision of the Milwaukee county circuit court that the law is unconstitutional and void.

The matter was brought before the circuit court on an application for a writ of mandamus, directed against the county clerk, ordering him to issue a marriage license for an applicant without a health certificate. The court held that the amount of fee provided for the examinations as required by law was unreasonably low, and that the law was an undue interference with personal liberty. The decision, while only that of a circuit court, will act as a stay to the enforcement of the law until the higher courts have passed on the question. Probably no other topic has inspired so large an amount of newspaper comment in the past month.

It is pretty near time that some of the aspirants for the job of city commissioner of Janesville made their formal appearance. The candidates for the judgeship are already in the field so there promises to be much interest in the April election after all.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

WHEN THE HEART STOPS.

Telling of his experiments with a new sort of respirator, a New York physician asserts that hearts which had ceased to pulsate for twenty-three minutes have been made to beat anew.

It has been thought that when the heart stops beating life is dead. It no longer sends the vital fluid circulating through the body. Respiration and other functions cease.

But now come the modern surgeons. With hands of wizardry they reach into the cardiac cavity and set the heart to beating again. Unless actual death of the tissues has supervened, life may come back to the body.

That is bodily resurrection. But—Suppose the figurative heart, the center of the mental organism, stops beating. In other words, suppose the hope which animates the human being seems to die. Can it be set to going again?

Just when the death of hope comes no one can tell. Probably never.

Go among the sudden "down and outs" of the big cities, lined up perhaps in the "bread line," and hold out to them the prospect of a resurrection of their worldly fortunes. You will see the eye lighten and the back straighten.

Hope is not dead even there, you see. Pass into the house of wealth where sorrow visibly expressed tells of a loved one taken away by death. Speak as the Master spoke of the sure resurrection, and if you speak in such wise as to carry conviction to the heart, hope will be rekindled in the mournful breast.

There also hope has not died. In fact, the physical restoration of the heart to its functions is a miracle not greater than the reawakening of hope. As the physician of the body may bring it back from the very brink of the grave, so may the physician of the soul, if properly equipped, restore its life.

Go to your Bible to read the words of Him who said:

"Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Is not that rest the reawakening of the hope of the heart?

On the Spur of the Moment

To a Taxi Meter.
They say the problem is unsolved. But still I have a notion That when some man invented you He found perpetual motion.

You never loaf upon the job. But do your stunt most gaily; You are forever in our minds. We think of about you daily.

A faithful servant, tried and true, We think it right to mention, The fact we think your masters should Refire you on a pension.

You click and chatter all the day, And seem to tire out never; For men may come and men may go, But YOU go on forever.

The Bore.
There's someone in every village who heads his friends at bay and forces them to listen to worn-out tales each day. Why don't these tireless mortals tell something new sometimes? 'Twould help to smooth out anger and lessen heinous crimes.

We like a bright new story, a story with a point; but loathe the kind which over-use has knocked all out of joint. We tire of "moss-grown" tales, made "rich" by old age; those which we've heard a hundred times, or read in yellow page.

Those are the ones we hate to hear, and yet we often meet a guy whose system's full of them from crown to head to toe. He says, most contentedly, "I heard a peach today, and out of sheer compassion we let him fire away. And though we're driven almost mad we try to be polite, and by a herculean heave put down desires to fight. He snorts and puffs and laughs and roars, and we try to do the same, although we've heard the tale so oft it's stale and flat and tame. And travel 'round wherever we may, we meet him of and o'er—the guy who peddles worn-out tales—the fellow called the bore."

Afterthoughts.
John D. says he believes in honest toil. If you say it quickly, it sounds like honest oil.

Do Not Jump at Conclusions.
"Do not jump at conclusions and do not be hasty in judgment," said Strickland W. Gilliam. "To illustrate my story I will tell a story of August."

"When a horse went by, August would jump at his conclusion. 'When a cow went by, August would jump at her conclusion.'"

"One day a mule went by and August jumped at the mule's conclusion and the mule kicked. 'That was the last of August. And the next day was the first of September.'"

ANNOUNCE PROGRAM FOR DRAMATIC CLUB

New Janesville Drama Society Meet in Regular Session Tonight With Good Talks Lined Out.

At seven-thirty tonight the Janesville Dramatic society will convene in their regular weekly meeting, at their rooms in the city hall building. Miss Lenora Casford, chairman of the program committee, has arranged a most interesting line of talks, and discussions for the evening.

Following a critique on the "Second Mrs. Tanageray" given by Rev. E. O. Hoffmeister, Miss Ella Jacob will review in details, the "Life and Art of Joseph Jefferson." This talk promises to create a good deal of interest, as the Jefferson family of actors are exceedingly popular in the dramatic world.

Anecdotes and general dramatic news is to be received from those having such information on hand, and it will be welcomed at any time during the evening. Miss Mary Roberts will give a reading on "Workhouse Ward," a production by Lady Gregory. She will be assisted by Messrs. Kennedy and Brown.

The society is getting anxious to present a play upon the stage. A little more careful study, on various subjects of interest, and then perhaps the argument for and against such a plan, will be heard before the members. Many favor an old drama being presented to the public, while others have their minds set on a popular play of modern times. A good deal of time has been spent in discussing "Within the Law," but it is feared that the society has not the material for presenting this masterful production. Mrs. Day is looking up good, up-to-date plays, and may be ready to make a report within a few weeks.

POPULARITY CONTEST HELD THIS MORNING

Students Take Interest in New Idea—Winners' Names Are to Be Kept Secret Until Phoenix is Published.

A popularity contest took place this morning at the local high school, in which every student cast his or her ballot, with the names of the most popular young man and young lady in the entire school on it.

A list of perhaps ten to twenty names could easily be made out from the general talk that has been taking place since the vote was taken this morning. Some interesting answers were cast by ballot in the general idea, and the contest bids fair toward creating a good deal of interest before the winners' names are announced.

The intentions are to keep the final count quiet until the semi-annual Phoenix publication is published, which book will go to press some time in May. Other contests will be held between now and May, to aid in improving the 1914 publication, over the previous one printed in 1912.

The nature of the contest held this morning, was more in the form of an attempt to create a new interest, in pushing the coming publication into the limelight, so that it will rank with other high class books printed by the larger high schools and smaller colleges.

Each student was requested this morning, to vote for someone who had aided materially in the high school in some shrewd manner, either in athletics, forensic work, society, or as being a good fellow. The entire school awaits the announcement of the winners with intense interest.

J.M. BOSTWICK & SONS.

Growing up here through the years and keeping steady pace with the development of the times this store has come to be a semi-public institution. "To have what the people want and when they want it and at fair prices"—that might well be mailed up as a motto over the door. That principle is a part of the mental make-up of every member of this organization here—or else the one who lacks it will soon gravitate somewhere else. "What the people want" is not alone new styles, but sound, reliable qualities; not alone offering odd lots at special prices, but the certainty of finding the right size and style and color without awaiting. To make the store measure up to these requirements at all times—even when there is a market scarcity of the right sort of merchandise—is the end to which we devote ourselves.

SERIOUS HEART DISEASE OFTEN CURED

By The Great Specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., L. L. B. Who Will Send His New Heart Book And a Two Pound Treatment Free to The Sick.

Sick people whose hearts are weak, deranged or diseased, who have short breath, palpitation, irregular heartbeat, pain in left side, shoulder and arm, or dropsy, should by all means send for the Doctor's new Book and Free Treatment. He cures many cases called incurable. Bad cases usually relieved in a day or two.

So remarkable are the results that he wishes every sick person to test this great treatment at his expense. His book will show that he is recommended by Professors, Physicians, Bishops, Statesmen, Bankers, Editors, Prominent Citizens and others.

Those treatments are the result of thirty years' extensive research and remarkable success in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach, liver, kidneys and nerves, which so often complicate each case. So astonishing are the cures effected, in most cases, that he is led to make this very liberal and unusual offer.

Certainly nothing could be more generous. Few physicians have such confidence in their treatments. You may never have such an opportunity again. No death comes more suddenly than that from heart disease.

Mr. Gilbert Radio, Altoona, Ill., cured after several physicians failed. Mrs. Edwin Somers, Decatur, Neb., after 10 failed. Mr. Austin M. Sanderson, Lyndon, Kans., after 5 failed. Mr. J. W. Runyon, Spencer, Ia., after 3 failed. Mrs. Lizzie Fowler, So. Charleston, O., after two pronounced her incurable. Many have been cured after from 5 to 15 physicians had failed.

Send at once to Dr. Franklin Miles, Dept. H. C., 718 to 728 Main St., Elkhart, Indiana, for Book and $2.50 Free Treatment before it is too late.

The Draught of Fishes

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—"Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught."—Luke 8:4.

The story of the great draught of fishes is original to Luke's gospel, and is one of the most beautiful of its kind in the New Testament. Jesus was by the lake of Gennesaret, sometimes called the Sea of Galilee, and the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God. There were two boats standing by the lake, but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets. He entered into one, which was Simon's, and asked him to thrust out a little from the shore, and he sat down and taught the people. It was when he had left of speaking that he said to Simon, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets." Simon replied that he and his partners had toiled all night, and had taken nothing; but "nevertheless," said he, "at thy word I will let down the net." And when they had done this, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes, so that their nets brake. And then they beckoned to those who were in the other boat to come and help them, and as a matter of fact both the boats were so filled with fish that they began to sink.

The effect on Peter was an overwhelming conviction of his sinfulness, and he said, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Nor was he less astonished or impressed than the others who were with him. But Jesus comforted him by saying: "Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men." "And when they had brought their boats to land, they forsook all, and followed him."

(1.) We learn from this charming incident that Jesus is a good paymaster. He borrowed an empty fishing smack, and repaid the owner of it by filling it with fish! In one of his discourses to his disciples on another occasion he had said, "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, and in the world to come eternal life." In the present instance he seems to have been showing his disciples, and showing us as well, just what he meant by these words, and giving a demonstration of their truthfulness.

(2.) We learn in the second place that Jesus is a wise counsellor. He told these fishermen just where the fish were, and just where to let down their nets with the most beneficial results. We all need advice every day in our business affairs, our domestic affairs, and the countless problems that are coming up continually in our existence. Some go to clairvoyants, some to palmists and spirit mediums for such advice, but others who know him go to the Lord their God. He has said in the 37th Psalm, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down."

(3.) We learn also that Jesus is a great benefactor. They who were simply fishers of fish now became fishers of men. What would Peter have amounted to had he remained in Capernaum? But what did he now become? Not only is his one of the three greatest names in the history of the Christian church, and not only is he now in felicity with his Lord and Master, but that same Lord and Master said to him and his fellow apostles, "Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Is this promise likely to come true? Yes, just as certainly as the Bible is the word of God, and Jesus Christ is the Son of God. But there are corresponding promises for all who know the true God and his Son, Jesus Christ, and who serve and trust him in the life of faith. He lifts the beggar from the dunghill to sit him among princes, an experience that has come to many a child of God in all the centuries long.

But what was the attitude of Peter that brought all this to pass in his case? The answer is simply, yieldedness of will. Christ asked him for his boat and he gave it to him; he told him to launch out into the deep for a draught and he launched out; when he was satisfied with the material result, he was asked to follow Jesus, and he left all and followed him.

To apply this to ourselves, we are to remember that the first step in the yielding of our will is the acceptance of Jesus Christ as our Saviour and the public confession of him as our Lord. This should be definite, intelligent and irrevocable on our part, trusting God to fulfill his word as written in the Gospel of John, 1:12 and 14.

THE UNFRIENDLY NEIGHBOR: (The Story.)

The apostles observed Jesus in the act of prayer. They saw him kneeling with upturned face. His glowing lineament showed the bliss of communion with God or repose after a long day of toiling. A goodly sight! No wonder it provoked the question how they could learn to pray after such a fashion, too. The universal teacher, taught through these suppliant all who would after, ward learn of him concerning this supreme act of the soul. He gave first the model of prayer. The Paternoster is an epitome. Here are the needs of the race and the individual in miniature. It is the alphabet, the numeral system out of which prayer of every description can be spelled and figured. Analytically, in its separate parts, it illustrates the contents of a rounded, acceptable prayer. Synthetically, it is a tenor; a spirit—cumulative power unmatched in written language. It is the chief ornament of every ritual. Its perpetual repetition wearies no one. It is suited alike to child and adult. From this matchless formula, guests pass to the spirit which should characterize the suppliant. To set this forth, he uses a homely domestic incident. We must transfer ourselves to the Orient to appreciate it. There was no mail or time-table to apprise the host of the hour of the guest's arrival. It would like as not be late at night, as travel was ordinarily continued then, to escape the heat of the day. The guest would be downright hungry, as there were no facilities of the modern restaurateur. The host's larger would like as not be empty, the climate making the preservation of edibles difficult, and leading them to live from hand to mouth. Borrowing would be the next thing in order. That of the half-awakened neighbor! To him the getting up from his warm bed, and the stumbling over his children as he lit the lamp, and miss upon their tiny mats about the floor, the taking down of the heavy bar across the door, the seems to his drowsy powers a superhuman exertion. Yet there comes at length a point where it is easier far to have done with the matter, and to be periodically roused by the persistent knocking and calling. The force of the parable is in the contrasts. God's eye is never closed in slumber. God's self is Love. His treasures are inexhaustible. He delights to give. There is no difference or discrimination on the part of God which must be first overcome by man's importunity. The delay is answer, if there is any, for the recipient's own highest advantage; that he may study and take to heart the promises, so that when at length the answer comes, he may be in a state of mind and heart to avail himself of the blessing to the uttermost. Postponement is for the advantage of the receiver, not the giver. The Paternoster is still in Jesus' mind. Earthly fathers have judgment to discriminate between good and evil gifts for their children. They have natural affection enough to incline them to bestow only good. If that be so—and who denies it?—how will not the Heavenly Father, infinite in wisdom, power, and love, bestow that all-inclusive gift, the life of the Holy Spirit, on those who, out of the vocabulary of the Paternoster and in the spirit of the parable, ask him?

TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Form and fervency! Their juxtaposition here is no accident. It is designed to teach us that they are not inimical; that the importunate soul can express itself in the phrase of the Paternoster. Phillips Brooks poured out his great heart in the prayer of St. John Baptist, and others of the "forms" of Prayer-book. Moved himself, he moved all who heard him. The golden mean is to be maintained, however, between a too rigid adherence to form and a persistence in extemporaneous prayer. John Baptist would likely give his disciples a form of prayer; he gave minute and practical directions to each class of his converts, the people, the publicans, the soldiers. He would hardly omit teaching them how to pray. Jesus is our standing pattern in prayer. He enforced his precept with his example. Twenty-one instances of his praying are noted in the Gospels—secret, public, at meals, long prayers, ejaculatory, intercessory for friends and enemies, all are recorded. The fervency of his prayer is ascribed in the Epistle to the Hebrews. His supplications were offered with "strong cryings and tears." We are to pray without ceasing. The bird is not always literally flying, but it is ready to fly on an instant. So our souls should be ready to spread their pinions, and mount to the mercy-seat on short notice. You can no more find a Christian without prayer than you can find a living man without a pulse. Prayer is a state rather than a specific act. Benefit depends on continuity. One must have the aptitude. Prayer-wheels turned by water-power are numerous in India. The prayer, pasted on the wheel, is thought to be said with every revolution. Those who laugh at the crudity of the device ought to ask whether in the average Christian prayer there is not some meaningless iteration. God does not need to be instructed or aroused. In Angelo's palace in Florence there is a closet in the wall covered with a second of his ideals. His secret pain laid open reward. So of prayer.

ANALYSIS AND KEY.

Origin of the Paternoster. Jesus observed in prayer. The model of all prayer. Its alphabet and numeral system. Spirit of prayer illustrated. Parable of unfriendly neighbor. Force of parable in its contrasts. God versus the churlish neighbor.

Tooth Talks

Below is given a few extracts from an article appearing in Oral Hygiene, January issue, which will be interesting at this time when the dental inspection work is being carried on in the city schools.

"Let us examine the average boy of ten years of age and see what we find. His ears and nose ancient, his teeth are white and shiny, his hair unkempt, hands grimy and dirty, fingernails. Shoes splashed with dirt or wet mud, clothes soiled, and an odor permeating through the atmosphere excite suspicion that his little body has not been washed for some time. His eyes, if they are good, yet it may be defective. If his face is washed it may disclose a color that is lacking in the bloom that a boy or girl should have and we might say, anemic."

"If otherwise his body appears normal we ask him to open his mouth. His external appearance troubles us. His internal appearance would shock us. Here we find teeth covered with green stain, temporary and permanent badly decayed, possibly fistulas on the gum surface showing the rotting of pus from an abscessed tooth or teeth and decomposing food around and between the teeth. We examine the child any further. Here at the gateway of the system is a source of infection and poison that would contaminate every mouthful of food taken into the body. With decomposition instead of digestion taking place in the alimentary tract, it is no wonder that the child suffers from a toxic condition which produces exanthema, anaemia, malnutrition, headaches, fevers and many other ailments."

"Such a mouth is an ideal feeding ground for the life and a child with such a mouth is far more susceptible to infectious diseases than one whose teeth are sound and kept free from food debris. Suppose at the entrance existed, how long it would take to disease and sickness would be kept in among the inhabitants? This boy described is but duplicated in the girl population. A thorough dental examination of five hundred and fifty school children in the town of Stratford, Connecticut, but one child was found to have a set of teeth free from decay. Look at the reports of the medical inspectors in the public schools who have made but a glancing examination and you will find that decayed teeth outrank all other physical defects combined."

"Therefore we must deduce from our analysis for school hygiene that the most conspicuous defect of the child is the unsanitary condition of its mouth. Like a pig pen or garbage drain slowly seeping its poison into the brook, which, flowing into the reservoir contaminates the water supply to a city, so do the products of decayed and decayed teeth with decomposing food slowly but surely poison the human system. Such children laugh and sneeze millions of germs made virulent and active in an ideal feeding ground, and they again the teeth as a crushing and masticating machine are frequently ruined by the time the child has reached twelve or fourteen years of age. It is true that they can live through life with this handicap, but you can rest assured that a child with a wrecked mouth at fourteen is traveling on second speed until he reaches thirty-five and from there he drops into his low gear, to finish his journey in a slow and uncertain state."

British Eat Many Potatoes.

It is estimated that in the British Isles 6,000,000 tons of potatoes are produced annually on about 600,000 acres, giving an average of ten tons to the acre, but a very large quantity of potatoes comes from abroad, so that the annual consumption is much larger than these figures would indicate.

A Loan in Fancy.

"You won't run any risk in lending me a thousand francs. I am writing a novel that is sure to go. You know what an imagination I have." "Well, you'd better imagine that I have lent you the money, then."

INDOOR WORK REDUCES STRENGTH

Because confining duties, lack of fresh air and sunshine gradually weaken even a strong constitution, and the enfeebled system readily accepts sickness and disease.

Scott's Emulsion checks such decline. Its pure cod liver oil is nature's grandest medicinal food while its hypophosphites act as a building tonic. It refreshes the body, puts vigor in the blood, strengthens the lungs, upbuilds the nerves and invigorates the whole system.

If you work indoors, Scott's Emulsion after meals will prevent much sickness and loss of time, and often thwarts tuberculosis—it builds up and holds up your strength.

The second lecturer showed the necessity of Christ's second coming, which, according to all victory over the grave. While this lecture is to be a continuation of the last, it is claimed that any one of the lectures is in itself a complete Bible study, intensely interesting. This series of Bible lectures is being given the world over and is creating considerable renewed interest in Bible study.

IS HIRED TO WIFE FOR TEN DAY TERM

Thomas Earl, a Shopiere Farmer, Has Sad Experience When He Visits Janesville.

Thomas Earl, a farmer residing near Shopiere, came to Janesville yesterday to secure some tobacco paper. He returned home today after a ten day sentence imposed by Judge Maxfield in municipal court this morning. In pleading guilty to a charge of drunkenness, Earl told Judge Maxfield that he became drunk infrequently, but that he recognized the folly of such a performance and that he would mend his ways at once. He was worried, especially over the fact that he had lost the tobacco paper for which he had come especially. Earl has a family of six children, the youngest of whom is sick, and the youngest John Vandervell pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and was given a fine of $10 or ten days in jail. He took the latter alternative. Tom Donahue pleaded guilty to being drunk, begged for a chance to sign a pledge, and hurried away to see Father. Money when Judge Maxfield suspended sentence for the purpose.

TAXPAYERS HASTEN TO MAKE PAYMENTS

City Treasurer's Office Is a Busy
Place as Month Closes.—Takes in $10,000 on Thursday.

The office of the city treasurer has been a busy place this week as scores of taxpayers who have delayed their settlements until the last minute have swarmed into the office to pay their taxes and avoid the two percent charge which will be made after the first of February. The treasurer's office will be open for an hour this evening as has been the custom for several weeks, and tomorrow will be the last day for tax obligations without the delinquent fee. Collections this week have averaged $10,000 a day, or better, some $11,000 having been taken during the first four days. Monday was the banner day of the tax collecting season, a total of $12,000 being received on that date. At the close of office hours yesterday $10,000 of the $10,000 was raised in Janesville for city, state and county purposes, had been paid. It is estimated that the total $20,000 or $25,000 to the delinquent fee will be made on the amount of $45,000 or $50,000.

BUYERS SATISFIED WITH TOBACCO CROP

Growers Are Receiving What They Ask For Because of Wonderful Results in Season's Output.

The tobacco output for this season is a marked success, both in the quality of the leaves and financially to the buyers and growers. Aside from the small percentage of the crop which was taken down at the first casing spell, the balance of the output has been delivered uniformly in the best packing conditions possible. The buyers have been perfectly satisfied with the condition of the leaves, for they rarely refuse in any instance to pay the grower what he asks. Most crops are being examined and received upon the terms before being delivered, as the contracts generally called for, but the dealers inform us that they have little fault to find with the tobacco as they see it. A good reason for the lack of trouble in receiving and paying the crop this year is due to the fact that most of the crop was in the shed and partly cured before being bought.

A quiet but steady absorption of the unsold remnants of the 1913 tobacco crop seems to be going on, the better grades for sorting and also for stemming purposes, but the bulk of the sales range a good many units under earlier figures. B. L. Page formerly sold 32a at 13¢/4c. Growers have been crowding for delivery dates pretty hard of late. Saturday was the big receiving day in this market of the season so far. Probably for the first half the crop sold on contract has been delivered to date.

A local correspondent on the present conditions, says: "The local tobacco trade is in a suspicious frame of mind. They want to know if gentlemen's agreements are things of the past, as many have fondly hoped, or if, notwithstanding the present enlightening state of public opinion on matters political and economic, they still exist in the tobacco trade. No one can voice more than a suspicion, but two things stand out in this year's operations in Wisconsin that look as though, in the absence of such an agreement, a remarkable unanimity of opinion that serves pretty much the same purpose has been animating most of the large operators and still continues to do so. During the buying season it was noted with amusement that all save three or four of the large concerns using Wisconsin tobacco for higher purposes stayed out of the market, allowing a few of the larger leaf dealers to monopolize the buying until a given date, upon which all jumped into the game. It is now being noted that the same unanimity of opinion seems to exist between three or four of the largest buyers of Wisconsin low grades. Hitherto, when a leaf packer has been operating heavily, buying in the fields, he has been followed up pretty closely by agents of the 'stemming' companies, who were willing to contract for his low grades, and he has sold year after year to practically the same people. Now each packer finds that the whole lot has been previously accustomed to sell his low grades evince no interest in the market whatsoever, but that one or two concerns with which he has never dealt are mildly interested in the general state of the low grade market, and that when extremely low prices are mentioned, this interest is instantly heightened. Packers opine, with good reason or none at all, as the case may be, that the various important stemming factories have already cast lots upon the important holdings of Wisconsin low grades. Of course, nobody knows, but we are a suspicious bunch out here in Wisconsin, and when the coincidence of so striking and startling a nature take place in the absorption of the crop, it is interesting, to say the least."

SNOWBALLS

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Slawab."

A snowball is a small lump of wet snow put together by deviltry. After a snowfall has been made something has to be done with it, and this is why so many speak of little boys in terms of cold scorn and compare them to smallpox and mosquitoes in terms of very favorable to both the latter. A snowball has to be thrown to be successful. There are millions of things at which a snowball can be thrown, but most of them are not interesting. But there are many things on which a snowball can be thrown in such a manner as to fill a small boy full of joy and almost holy joy. No one who loves children, can watch the look on an innocent child's face after his snowball has melted with a plug hat which unless the watcher owns the plug hat, owning a plug hat so dried up the streams of affection and charity that many a man whose ten-dollar lid has spoken with positive ill nature to the thrower instead of praising him for his skill. Plug hats are exremely deleterious to the disposition and should not be worn north of the torrid zone. Snowballs are also an ideal mark for snowballs. There is no greater joy than that of urging a medium-sized snowball to follow its way through a large pane of glass except possibly that of a railroad magnate when he finds a chance to buy up a small and prosperous railroad and balance a huge and towering monument of bonded balls through glass is mischievous because it destroys property and all railroad magnates agree that the throwers should be severely discouraged.

Two or three small boys can so thoroughly impregnate the atmosphere with snowballs that it is impossible for the features of the case to pass by to elbow their way through them without damage. There are no snowballs in the desert of Sahara and many a pedagogue who has tried to pass a schoolhouse at recess time in winter has sighed for the residence in Timbuctoo.

A LEADER IN REAL STRENGTH

THE OLD LINE LIFE INSURANCE CO.
OF AMERICA—HOME OFFICE
MILWAUKEE

This Company Writes Life, Health and Accident Insurance.

By RUPERT F. FRY

Old and tried plans, with new and improved methods injected into any business, bespeak safety and progressive-ness. The plan upon which The Old Line Life Insurance Company of America operates is old and tried and carries with it the modern ideal of ideal life insurance. It operates upon a plan which is absolutely fair and safe. Every premium insurance on the non-participating plan long since passed the experimental stage. The element of speculation is entirely eliminated.

To illustrate what is meant by new and improved methods, the life policies of this Company are entirely unadorned and Health Insurance, which has back of it all the safeguards of money and experience and characterizes its life contracts.

The stamp of public approval of the Company's plan and methods is shown in its growing list of policyholders, which comprises many of the most conservative and intelligent men in this and other states.

The policyholder knows exactly, before he applies for insurance, what the deposit will be each year, and that the benefits offered in the policy are absolutely guaranteed. The large capital and surplus act as an additional guarantee to policyholders, and the reserve is set aside annually, as in companies of this kind, and is not subject to the whims of a single man.

This Company's first risk passed as an examination of the last risk assumed by any insurance company. This is only one item in demonstration of the improved and safe methods adopted. The foundation is of the solid stone order. The rates and values were actually correct from the beginning. No changes were found necessary in order to arrive at the present profitable position. Its non-speculative investments are reflected by low rates closely following the investments of insurance companies in former years. The invested assets, increasing over a million dollars, have never had a dollar in payment of either principal or interest.

Every safeguard that human mind can contrive has been devised for the benefit and security of policyholders. These facts explain why the Company has been a success from its inception. A deviation from its past and correct practice, to anything approaching uncertainty, could not be attempted. The foundation is so firm that no such change would at this time be tolerated by the law, or by its thousands of policyholders.

As usual, the management wishes friendly competitors much success for the year 1914.

TICKNOR TO PROVIDE HOME FOR CHILDREN RIOT AMONG SHOWMEN

Reaches Agreement With State to Care for Offspring and Pay Court Costs.

Ward Ticknor today reached an agreement with the state authorities by which he promised to take his two children with him, the non-support of whom he was charged in a trial pending in municipal court, to his home in Chicago. Ticknor also agreed to pay all costs of the court proceedings and to reimburse Mrs. Hughes for the care of the children for the past year. When the formalities of the settlement had been gone over thoroughly, District Attorney Dunwiddie moved that the charges against Ticknor be dismissed, the motion being granted by Judge Maxfield after it was shown to his satisfaction that the home which Ticknor would provide for his offspring in Chicago would be satisfactory in every way.

OLD TIME "HEY RUBE" RIOT AMONG SHOWMEN

Resented Shure on Buffalo Bill. According to the Chicago Examiner, there was something doing at the meeting of the Showmen's League of America in Chicago yesterday, as the name of Warren Patrick, a former Janesville resident is mentioned. It should prove interesting reading, but its veracity is not vouched for. It somebody yelled "Hey Rube!" and the "riot" started.

The worst fight ever staged between "show guys" and "towners" was scarcely a marker to the young riot at the Wellington hotel early yesterday morning between opposite factions of the Showmen's League of America.

There are at least a dozen black eyes, several split lips, a brace or two of broken ribs and countless bruises in the list of casualties. It all started over a little difference of opinion. Organized about two years ago, the Showmen's League of America has become a powerful organization. Its president is Colonel William Cody (Buffalo Bill).

On the night of March 4 the league will hold a ball at the Hotel Sherman for the first time created to take care of and inform showmen and their widows and orphans.

The Trouble Brews. The meeting was for the purpose of deciding certain plans for the coming open air season and a few details of the ball. Colonel Cody presided until about 9:30 o'clock, when he left and Vice President Charles Andrews took the chair. Trouble was brewing. For instance, "Johnny" Warren, now partner of the Wallace Hagenbeck shows, formerly had an "act" with a small show. He said that "Tom" Weideman, owner of the Buffalo Ranch, who is now a showman, is merely pays a fair price for good attractions.

Then "Billy" Rice of the Rice & Dore Shows declared that the league was becoming too much of a "showman" organization; that it should be more active.

"What are you driving at?" queried Andrews.

Andrews said that he ought to have a younger, more active man for president than Colonel Cody," shouted Rice.

"Hey, Rube!" Lights Go Out. "Where do you get that stuff?" roared "Johnny" Warren. "Get back to the high pitch."

"The cook's tent for yours," yelled "Tom" Weideman at Warren. "You wouldn't know a big top if you fell on it."

"Throw 'em out of the window," shouted Andrews. Then some one turned on the lights and yelled "Hey Rube!" That is the battle cry for showmen so they went at it.

"Kid" Bartlett, who is with the Buffalo Ranch, swung on "Johnny" Warren. Warren came back at him with a beer bottle and the battle started.

Down off the platform, across the ring curb, clear over the blues and reserves and out through the marginals to the hall swirled the fighting mass of about 150 showmen.

Fighters Swirl Into Lobby. Beer bottles and glasses pivoted through the hall. "Kid" Bartlett went down and some one kicked him in the ribs, cracking a pair of them. "Black" Allen and "Tom" Weideman both went to his rescue. On through the hall, surged the fight to the main parlor lobby, and then down the main staircase to the main lobby, where house detectives, clerks, guests and porters finally managed to separate the combatants. Weideman and Allen took Bartlett back upstairs to dress his wounds. Many others followed suit, and the remainder adjourned to the bar to drink a glass of peace. But it was not for long.

Warren Patrick of New York was in the crowd—a Warren adherent. "Kid" Bartlett entered the bar, carrying a bottle in each hand, and started toward Patrick and Patrick started for the door, with the "Kid" in hot pursuit, the crowd following.

Then beer bottles appeared from pockets and in an instant the air was full of them. In the alley back of the Illinois Theatre the "Kid" caught Patrick and down they went. After they had been pried apart a truce was declared.

LA FOLLETTE WRITES OF WILSON PROGRAM

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—President Wilson's recommendation for the control of the financial operations of interstate railroads by the interstate commerce commission will be very popular, I have no doubt at the outset, not unusual to find advocates for government control of capitalization among those who have studied the railroad problem. Ten years ago I entertained a like view.

This is Senator La Follette's statement in his magazine issued today, in discussing legislation recently proposed by President Wilson. Bills have been introduced in congress to carry out the ideas suggested by the president, the most important of which give the interstate commerce commission authority to regulate the financial operations of the railroads. The senator points out that the obligations of the railroads owe the public are adequate and impartial service at reasonable rates.

"It is charged with no duty to become legally or morally answerable for the financial juggling of the railroad management," continues the senator. "The railroads have no right to exact from the public rates high enough to pay interest and dividends upon stocks and bonds which exceed the fair value of the property."

Protecting Investors. "No warrant or excuse can be offered for the government assuming any responsibility regarding capitalization of common carriers for the protection of investors. The purchase by an individual of railroad stocks and bonds is a speculation, or for investment, is solely a matter of option with the purchaser. He buys in his own right and at his own risk. Upon principle, the government owes no other or different obligation to the man who buys railroad stocks and bonds than to the man who buys Standard Oil or Tennessee Coal and Iron stocks and bonds, or the man who purchases a horse, a house, and lot or a farm."

The moment that investments are made in securities authorized by the government, that moment property rights in those securities become fixed. The commission may find that it has been misled, that it has grossly blundered. But its mistake is irrevocable.

Waste of Time. We all complain of the shortness of time, and yet have much more than we know what to do with. Our lives are spent either in doing nothing at all, or in doing nothing to the purpose, or in doing nothing that we ought to do; we are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be a end of them.

MISSED THE DINNER

By STELLA SCHMIDT.

Though the moon might vary its time of rising and the stars might grow tardier and tardier each night in making their stealthy journey across the sky, old Mrs. Searson never varied in any respect the details of her daily life.

In the daytime she read her newspaper. She read it slowly—read the political news, the society news, the murders and the advertisements. She began at the beginning and she read on and on steadily to the end. She neglected no part. The political news had not the slightest significance of her, the personal gossip and the society notes were absolutely unimportant from her point of view, the advertisements whetted no desires, for she had no desires to whet. She merely read the newspaper, that was all.

In the evening she cooked her meal. Then she ate it all alone. She did not know what a monotonous meal it was. She ate it, surrounded by the faded portraits of the dead. She had forgotten long ago that she was all alone. The pain of loneliness she could never know again. Neither could she ever know again desire or ambition.

On summer evenings after her meal was over she sat out on her porch and watched the passers by. She watched them without taking any interest in them. She could see little of her neighbors and she heard less.

Every now and then the woman who lived across the street tried to talk to her. The woman who lived across the street was lonesome. Her dead were still dead to her, and she longed to see them and kiss their lips. She often looked over at old Mrs. Searson and felt old Mrs. Searson's loneliness, too. The woman who lived across the street did not realize what a potent anesthetic time had proved itself to be in old Mrs. Searson's case. The pain of loneliness was real to her.

So the woman who lived across the street hit upon the idea of giving a little dinner and inviting old Mrs. Searson. In doing this she meant well.

Old Mrs. Searson had watched the postman pass by her house day after day as she had watched every one and everything else pass by. When one morning the postman entered her gate and knocked on her door, it was very strange. He handed her a letter. She opened it and read without any particular surprise the invitation to the dinner over the way. She, like the people she read about in the newspaper every day, was going out to dine. Then when she began to think it over she realized that she was a human like other human beings, and then a really surprising thing came about. She recovered from the anesthetic.

She did not sleep much that night. Tossing and tossing on her bed, and thinking and thinking, she was chiefly wondering what she should wear to the dinner across the way. Yes, she was very human. She was even excited.

In the morning she got up unusually early and at once she began searching among her clothes. How wonderfully they had endured the passage of the years!

The garments she selected as befitting the occasion she laid out upon the bed at nine o'clock in the morning. She had her breakfast all out of its proper place, an hour and a half late. She did not read her newspaper, she indulged in abnormal quantities of tea, she varied her diet at lunch time. She did no housework and no sewing. She did nothing and yet she was busy. She broke a plate and spilled water.

She finally decided to take a good rest in order that she might be fresh for the dinner. So she lay down on her couch, being careful not to disturb her fiery that was spread out on the bed. There she soon dropped off to sleep and slept soundly.

When she awoke with a start it was dark in the room.

She groped her way to the bureau and found a match. Striking it, she looked at the clock and discovered that it was two hours past the time set for the dinner at the house of the woman across the street!

Old Mrs. Searson was relieved beyond measure by this discovery. Now she did not have to go to the dinner at all!

She put all her clothes back carefully in the trunk with calm satisfaction. Then she ate some bread and drank a cup of tea and relapsed into her normal life.—Chicago Daily News.

PORTO RICO IN BAD WAY, SAYS GOVERNOR

Gov. Arthur Yager.

Arthur Yager, the new governor of Porto Rico, has drawn a dark picture of financial, commercial and industrial conditions in that island in this first message to the insular legislature, which is now in session. It was a surprise to those who believed that the island was never more prosperous. He suggested the immediate appointment of a legislative committee to study the situation and discover where economies can be made.

A Hint to Wives. When a man knows that there is always a watchful eye on him; that if he forgets to be thankful for some service done him, if he is absent-minded, if he neglects to kiss his wife good-by, it will be all counted against him—then his spontaneity will die.—Harper's Bazaar.

January 30, 1914.—The storm that was in this vicinity yesterday morning has moved eastward with great rapidity and is now off the Atlantic coast. A secondary depression that formed in the West Gulf states in connection with it is moving slowly eastward along the Gulf coast. These two disturbances have been attended by rain and snow throughout the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and the Lake Region. The cold wave following the first of them has reached a line running from New York to Texas, and will be felt on the Atlantic coast today or tonight.

A barometric depression occupies western Canada, and is causing scattered precipitation in the Northwest.

and rising temperature throughout the west.

Stenography 2,000 Years Ago.

It seems incredible, but it can be proved, already in the olden times there were stenographers who took down the speeches made in the Roman senate or in public. They were called notarii and we find a place in Suetonius where Augustus is angry because the stenographers reported the speech of Caesar for Metellus in a very imperfect manner.

Don't let your house remain vacant for a month, when you can find a tenant for what a few days' rent would bring.

Seals are still numerous and are disliked by Labrador fishermen. Dr. Grenfell says that he has known a seal to haunt a net so persistently that to get any fish the owner had to watch all the while at one end of it, and even then the seal would almost snap off the fisherman's hand as he raced to be first to disentangle the salmon.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE VALUE OF A POSE.

To accuse a man of posing is to impute insincerity. And as insincerity is something to be scorned, so do we scorn the poseur. Yet there is value in a pose, under one circumstance—and that is when it represents the ideal of the person who poses. A man who, wishing to gain our admiration, interests himself in sociological problems, organizing self-help clubs among those less fortunate and giving both himself and his time, is accomplishing something really worth while, even though it is but a pose, as we may suspect.

It may be that you think it very fine to be considered well read, an authority on the better class of literature, on the best forms of art or the highest type of musical expression. You are not genuinely interested in the start at least, in any of these things. You like to look as better informed than some of your acquaintances.

It is necessary, of course, that you do some studying. That in itself will teach you to concentrate on a matter which you at heart would prefer to leave unread. That is discipline. It is quite possible that as your mind becomes better disciplined, and your education broadens, you will end by taking a real, not mock, interest in what you are posing.

It is only a pose of yours, so we are told when some of our circle goes in for charity, music, art or literature. Perhaps it is.

But isn't it better that Mrs. A. who has few home cares, thanks to her husband's success, should go in for charity, rather than her neighbor, Mrs. B., whose family has grown up and married, should display a real, or make-believe interest in good literature, rather than sit about the house, getting what ideas she has from the contents of a paper covered novel?

If you, keenly conscious of your own human failings, of your ignorance on certain subjects, or your own deplorable selfishness, wish to pose as an ideal, perhaps unsuspected and that you will continually bolster yourself up with a little study here, or a little spectacular generosity there, so that your friends may not suspect too strongly that you aren't as good or as learned as you would have us at first pretend to be.

And if you suspect a friend of posing, consider before you criticize. If he is posing as something better than he would himself be, leave him alone, except to stimulate him now and then by making him be really charitable if he poses as charitable, or really learned if he poses as learned.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl eighteen years old and am good looking. I attend school and devote my whole time to study. I do not care to go with young men, but I have a few friends, my dear, and I have chances to learn and to be really useful if you finally decide to be a nun.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is there any real art in dancing? If so, what is it? (2) Could you please give me a recipe for checker-board cake? Is it necessary to have extra cake lines for it?

The Kitchen Cabinet

Then strain and add the prunes, mould, and chill. Serve twice while cooking to prevent the prunes from settling. Serve with sugar and cream.

Pineapple Cream—Two cups of water, one cup of sugar, one can of pineapple, two cups of cream. Make a syrup by boiling the sugar and water fifteen minutes, strain, cool, add the pineapple, and freeze to a mush. Fold in whip cream, cream, let stand thirty minutes before serving. Serve in frappe glasses and garnish with onion pineapples.

Turkish Pilaf—One-half cup of washed rice, three-quarter cup of tomatoes, stewed and strained, one cup of brown stock, highly seasoned, three tablespoons of butter, add the tomato, to the stock, and heat to boiling-point; add the rice, and steam until the rice is soft; stir in the butter with a fork, and keep uncovered so that the steam may escape. Serve in place of a vegetable, or as border for curried or fricasseed meat.

Bread and Pig Pudding—Cut figs into small dice. Make a custard by heating a cupful of milk and pouring it upon four eggs beaten light with six tablespoons of sugar, then cooking it until it is just thick enough to coat the spoon. Dip crustless slices of bread for a second in milk, put a layer of them into a pudding-dish cover with the figs, and pour over all the hot custard. Then put in more bread, more figs and custard, and proceed until the dish is full. Wait a moment for the bread to absorb some of the custard, and pour the rest of the hot liquid into the dish until it is full to the brim. Cover the dish and bake until the custard is set, uncover, and brown. Serve as soon as baked. Eat with a hard sauce.

Veal and Ham Croquettes—Mince enough cold veal to make a cupful, chop finely, mix with it half as much cold boiled ham and one-fourth as much fine crumbs. Rub the veal of a hard-boiled egg through a colander or vegetable press and add to the mixture. Season with pepper and onion juice and moisten with thick cream, or gravy, or water. Then whip in a raw egg to bind the mixture and make into croquettes. Roll in egg and in crumbs, set aside to form and stiffen, and fry.

Chocolate is such a favorite with most people that one never tires of it in different combinations. Here are some new ones to try.

Chocolate Pudding—Take a pint of milk, a quarter of a cup of sugar, one egg, a tablespoonful of flour mixed well with the sugar, a tablespoonful of chocolate and vanilla flavoring. Mix the flour and sugar, and add it to the well beaten egg; add the milk a little at a time, saving out a little to mix with the chocolate. Melt the chocolate over hot water. Add a little of the milk and stir it into the first mixture. Stir constantly, and cook until smooth; put away to cool and serve in glasses with whipped cream on top.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding—Melt a square and a half of chocolate over steam; add a half cup of sugar, half cup of milk, an egg well beaten, a cup of flour and a teaspoon of baking powder with a pinch of salt, one teaspoon of melted butter. Steam one and a half hours. Serve with a sauce made of powdered sugar, butter and the yolks of two eggs.

Another Steamed Pudding—Cream three tablespoons of butter; add two-thirds of a cup of sugar gradually, and one egg well beaten. Mix and sift two and one-half cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoon of salt. Add to the creamed mixture, alternating with one cup of milk; then add two ounces of melted chocolate. Turn into a greased mold and steam two and a half hours. Serve with the following sauce: Cream a fourth of a cup of butter, add one cup of powdered sugar gradually, one-half teaspoon of vanilla and a fourth of a cup of heavy cream, beaten stiff.

Chocolate Caramel Cake—Mix together the following ingredients: Two ounces of chocolate, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour, a quarter of a cup of butter, two eggs, two teaspoons of baking powder and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in three layers. Caramel Filling—One and a half cups of sugar, a half cup of sweet milk, a teaspoonful of butter. Boil until it spins a thread, then when cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla.

A dainty little cracker for afternoon teas is prepared by putting a spoonful of soft fudge on small butter, thin crackers. Add a half of a nutmeg, and you have a delicious little cake with which to treat your friends.

Flower Keeps its Freshness.

A common South African flower possesses the valuable property of keeping fresh for two months or more after cutting. It is a white star of Bethlehem, producing a compact spike of flowers of a stiff, erect stalk 18 inches or two feet long. The flowers are of a thin and papery tissue, all white except the yellow anthers. It can be sent over as a cut flower from South Africa to England, and then lasts for weeks in water.

Women Worth While

MRS. HENRY C. STUART.
By Selene Armstrong Harmon

"Interests? Hobbies?" repeated Mrs. Henry C. Stuart, of Virginia, pausing as if for breath she began to enumerate them. Sitting before the flaming logs of an open fireplace, the library of her Washington home, the freighting playing effective tricks on her masses of dark hair and accentuating her youthfulness, she looked to be the sister rather than the mother of a certain sixteen-year-old girl. Then, reading them off on the fingers of a slender hand, she began:

"Husband, daughter, home, music and automobiles, for that matter, to make life full for one woman? Speaking of interests in the sense in which you mean them—the things apart from my immediate family ties in which I am most interested, I can say that these are music and the driving of my automobile."

"In 1907 I took my daughter and her governess, who fortunately was concerned in the discipline of children, and went to Paris to study music. I cultivated my voice, which is a high soprano, for four years. While in Paris I sang much in concert and regularly in the Russian church. There, when I came to know well and to reverberate Massenet, the composer, Massenet was always deeply interested in young people and young voices. He never failed to bless and inspire them."

"Puccini is a composer whom I also came to number among my friends here in Paris. Then, there was Masterlinck and his wife, George and Le Blanc. Both are as fascinating as they are, pictured by the enthusiastic journalists of two continents. Masterlinck is simple in manner, approachable, a delightful conversationalist. It is charming to see how utterly dependent he is upon his wife. She is the most beautiful and the most artistic woman I met in all France."

"Mrs. Stuart's work in Paris was interrupted by a desperate illness, from the effects of which she has only recently recovered. She was taken ill in Paris in 1910, and her husband immediately retired from the race which he had entered for governor of Virginia and hurried to France, remaining at his wife's bedside until she was strong enough to return to America. It is a source of infinite pleasure and gratification to Mrs. Stuart that her husband was recently elected governor."

"Miss Mary Fulton Stuart is the sixteen-year-old daughter of Governor and Mrs. Stuart. She is a highly gifted musician, is still in school, and will not be presented to society for at least two years."

EVERYDAY TALKS FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE
BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY

It is sometimes unwise to try to destroy or uproot an old belief. The responsible for the uprooting of the children is not as old as Adam, but rather near it.

The good book is full of proverbs about the discipline of children, but the talk is aimed at the fathers who are to be told what to do concerning their children.

The way the average father brings up his children is along the lines, "I hear you go and and mamma about it," and the "Don't bother me, I'm busy" lines.

It is because our men have decided that the responsibilities of raising a family belong to the woman's shoulders alone that our world is as bad, or good—as it is? Is the work of raising a family of growing boys and girls, that are just running over with enthusiasm and enthusiasm that needs careful directing in the right channels a woman's work alone?

When a woman is left with a family of children on account of the death of her husband no one criticizes too harshly if her sons don't register high on the bulletin board of success.

Because they had no father to direct them. Strange to relate it's the boy that misses the guiding hand of a father who often wants the highest in the contest. Does this imply that the average father is willing to let mother run the ship too much alone? Does it imply that he is apt to think that if he pays the grocery bill and the taxes (neither bill is small) he is performing his duty to the letter?

Every woman that is normal desires a home and husband with children, but what many of them don't realize until it is too late is that the success of that home depends a great deal on the manner of a man she marries, that her children's characters depend to a alarming extent upon the character of the man who she takes for life—for better or worse.

This isn't any eugenic talk, from all such deliver me! I really believe that the end-Creator runs this world on a wheel of the grooves of the law for a while longer. It's simply a question of the man of the house that he wake up and take a sixty horse power interest in the doings of his growing daughters and sons.

DAME FASHION SHOWS FAVOR FOR RED HUES

Margaret Mason Writes of Orange Coloring Craze in New Spring Creations.

(By Margaret Mason.)
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, Jan. 30.—Yes, indeed, the first fruits of fashion are oranges, orange hued hair is all the rage and even the newest complexion is verging on the orange skin, flappers flaunting the new Spring fashions fairly reel with the blitheness and jaundiced lengths of silk bulk and jaundiced lengths of orange-hued, sponge, ratine voile, marquisette and crepe. Many are solid one-toned effects while others are broken up into orange and white checks and stripes in a truly eggy manner. Some of the exquisitely sheer voiles and crepes even go farther on their fruity way and show sprays of oranges in the natural tints hand-stenciled on their filmy surfaces.

There is little doubt that femininity will fly to this orange fad for every woman knows that orange trees bear both fruit and flower simultaneously. It is not a wild hope to cherish, therefore, that orange blossoms will be the legitimate fruits of a fetching orange costume. Besides, Nell Gwynn was an orange girl and never won a king. As a timely fashion tip, however, you would do well not to let the orange color scheme too profusely until after the 17th of March.

Next to looking like an orange, the best fashion bet for early Spring is to disguise yourself like an awning. Widely striped ratines, voiles and organdies in all the combinations of red, blue, green, yellow or brown stripes, with white are startlingly stunning and a boon to portly figures.

The passer for pink panties, neckties and other personal pretties seems to know no limit, and all of Mrs. Dainty's Spring underwear glows and blushes with the faintest rosy tint of dawn. Recklessly combined with the frank openness of all-over net no wonder the nighties, combinations, chemises and knickers gradually used to affect it is at least cheering to reflect that Spring is near.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—It takes Father to do something bright.

Aurora Borealis.
According to a theory recently enunciated, the aurora borealis is formed of cathode rays, emitted by the sun and deflected by the terrestrial magnetic field in the upper strata of the atmosphere. The velocity of these cathode rays must be nearly equal to that of light, and very much greater than the velocity of cathode rays produced in the laboratory. Lenard concludes that these extremely "hard" cathode rays are emitted by unknown radio-active substances in the sun.

"Gentlemen: In the year 1908, I was taken with a heavy cold and a very short cough. I went to several doctors, who gave me a lot of medicine. Finally, I went to a specialist, who gave me some that made me sick of all kinds of food, consequently I failed in health. I then went to the Catskills, and seemed to get better, but the cough still kept up. I stayed there for one year, and then went to a famous Jersey City, N. J., sick man. About the time of my return, my brother recommended Eckman's Alternative to me very highly. It is a new remedy two years since I first took it. ## Broadway Jones

From the Play of George M. Cohan

EDWARD MARSHALL

With Music from the Play

Copyright, 1914, by G. M. Cohan Company
"Can you beat that?" he demanded of the fascinated girl. "I knew that thing by heart when I left the hotel." Almost angrily he thrust the paper into her receptive hands.
"It took me hours to write that!" he earnestly declared. "Hours full of most-quit-to-bites! I got up early, too, and learned the thing by heart. But I might have known that I'd forget it! I never could remember anything!"
She took the paper, glanced at it with highly kindled interest and was on the point of reading it when there came an interruption. It was Sammy. There ever is a Sammy ready to step in and spoil big moments in our lives.
"Are you—too—busy—for—company?" he asked deliberately and irreverently. The imp, though fat, was quite cognizant of the fact that he had come at the wrong moment, and his heart was filled with joy because he felt so certain of it.
"Who is it, Sammy?"
"Ma—and—Clara."
Josie sighed, then looked at Broadway with an inquiry upon her face. He nodded. She thrust the paper he had given her into the top drawer of her desk. "All right, Sammy; tell them to come in."

With a gravity like that of the sphinx, but with a glint of malice satisfied in his small eyes, the fat boy ambled heavily to the door. With a voice as disproportionate to his years as were his calves, he cried invitation to his mother and his sister. It was as if they waited on the other side of a wide stream and he was battling a howling tempest with his tones. His "All right, mom, come on in," rasped Broadway's nerves; the fact that he had failed in the delivery of the brief eloquence which had been fruit of midnight and past-midnight oil at the unspeakable, Grand, a certain feeling (such as all of us have had) that he was doing worthily while getting less than proper credit for it, made him hate Sammy at that moment.

He wondered if he might not throttle him in some deserted spot before the day was over, looked him over carefully, observed the size of his columnar neck, and hopelessly abandoned thought of it. His hands would never reach around it! The visitors appeared.

While attention was distracted from her, in answer to an irresistible impulse, Josie took from the desk drawer the paper Broadway had entrusted to her, and thrust it into a sacred, secret place within her shirtwaist.

Mrs. Spotswood, filled with the fine excitement of the matron who is certain that romance is working in her neighborhood, was devoured by that modification of the spirit of the chase which sends the ladies, rich or poor, good or bad, upon the scent of such elusive news with all the zeal of sportsmen after squirrels or pheasants. She was inclined toward worry in regard to Jonesville's fate and also inclined to confidence in it because she had known Broadway since he was a little boy (ah, what errors have good women made because they have known someone since he was a little boy!) and knew that while he might be "wild" he was not wicked, for his baby curls had been, so sweet; pleased beyond expression by the deep impression which her own delicious Clara had made upon Broadway's affixed, well-mannered, plainly competent friend—animated by these various emotions and not less than twenty others which I have not mentioned. Mrs. Spotswood wore a fluttering smile as she accepted her baby-mastodon son's infant fog-whistle invitation.

"Good morning, Josie."
Josie smiled at her, although she had regretted her arrival almost as much as Broadway had. She had so wished to read the words upon the hotel letter paper which her new employer had spent half the night in writing.

Mrs. Spotswood's smile expanded till it fairly beamed at Josie before she turned her eyes to Broadway, and then she started with surprise. It was because she had been certain he was there that she had come; a visit from her to the factory was an unheard-of thing; she had distinctly heard his voice as she had passed outside the open door, but now her deep astonishment because he was within the room seemed almost overwhelming.
"Oh, hello, Broadway!"
He smiled nervously and hurried forward. Things had not gone as he had wished, but he was not resentful. Never had he been so humble. Had he not, the night before, defaced that paper with the tale of his humility and the details of his good resolves? Besides, had not Mrs. Spotswood guarded him in childhood against wrath at home on more than one occasion, and had she not, the previous evening, with the understanding and good humor of an angel, prepared for him that lemonade which held the magic touch for which his system yearned?
"I'm awfully glad to see you here in the plant," she earnestly assured him, and meant every word of it. Then: "Did you have a good night's sleep?"
Even the question was a nervous shock, but he smiled bravely, although he shuddered slightly as he asked in answer, "How do I look?"
"Grand!" she exclaimed.
Now his shudder was not slight. "Don't mention the name, please."
"You must come to our house to supper."
"Believe me, I shall be glad to get it," he said fervently.
Now her soul paid tribute to that subtle hint of romance which was in the air. "You, too, Josie."
"Oh, thanks, Mrs. Spotswood."
"Is the judge here?"
She knew perfectly well that he was not; she had seen him through the window of his little one-roomed, peaked-roofed office building just across the street as she had turned into the

"Oh, hello, Broadway!"
He smiled nervously and hurried forward. Things had not gone as he had wished, but he was not resentful. Never had he been so humble. Had he not, the night before, defaced that paper with the tale of his humility and the details of his good resolves? Besides, had not Mrs. Spotswood guarded him in childhood against wrath at home on more than one occasion, and had she not, the previous evening, with the understanding and good humor of an angel, prepared for him that lemonade which held the magic touch for which his system yearned?
"I'm awfully glad to see you here in the plant," she earnestly assured him, and meant every word of it. Then: "Did you have a good night's sleep?"
Even the question was a nervous shock, but he smiled bravely, although he shuddered slightly as he asked in answer, "How do I look?"
"Grand!" she exclaimed.
Now his shudder was not slight. "Don't mention the name, please."
"You must come to our house to supper."
"Believe me, I shall be glad to get it," he said fervently.
Now her soul paid tribute to that subtle hint of romance which was in the air. "You, too, Josie."
"Oh, thanks, Mrs. Spotswood."
"Is the judge here?"
She knew perfectly well that he was not; she had seen him through the window of his little one-roomed, peaked-roofed office building just across the street as she had turned into the

CHAPTER XI.
Higgins, erratic, demagogic, often vicious tempered, was, when once his championship had been enlisted, an enthusiastic advocate. As he himself had said, his heart was "in the right place," and that morning, as he went through the plant explaining that the young new owner had decided not to sell out to the trust, but would stand by Jonesville, Jones' Pepsin gum and those resident in one and employed in manufacture of the other, Broadway lost none of merit through his declaration.

In that heart in the right place Higgins had admired the way the smallest city man had stood up to his five feet ten of brawn and threatened to throw him out of the building, discharge him from the plant, and drive him from the town if he did not cease threatening a woman. He was sorry he had lost his temper while with Josie.
He had rushed through the great, rambling buildings of the old-fashioned manufactory at high speed and high enthusiasm. His manner had been such that his mere appearance had been signal for the stoppage of the wheels of industry and the gathering of eager groups about him to listen to the news which one could not doubt he bore, and when the nature of that news became known generally, the much-relieved workmen, the working-women, and even the basket girls and bundle-boys throughout the plant, became instantly demonstrative of great joy.

The first cheer, that which had mercifully interrupted Clara's inquisition of Broadway on the subject of his friend, was followed by another and another as the news spread. A gradual cessation of the grinding roar which was apparent, even in the office building, when the plant was operating, showed that here and there and everywhere machines were being stopped by those who wished to leave them so that they might hear the news.
The office-building group stood spell-bound, listening. None knew what had occurred. They might have been alarmed had the uproar been less unmistakably enthusiastic.
"What is it?" Mrs. Spotswood asked excitedly.
"I don't know," was Josie's answer.
Clara certainly knew nothing of the nature of what might be happening, and none was further than Broadway from a guess that what he had told Higgins, in a sentence wherein anger freely mingled with the news of his determination to retain and operate the gum plant, could have been accepted as good reason for such a really notable demonstration of the joy of gum makers.
It was the judge, at this instant, bustling in, who made the situation clear to them.
"Great Scott!" he said, aglow with genial satisfaction. "Talk about excitement! The whole plant is in an uproar."
"What is it, judge?" the owner of the plant inquired.
"Why, didn't you send a message out there by Higgins?"
"Er—yes, I did."
"Well, that's what they're cheering about. The men are yelling themselves hoarse and the boys are dancing with joy." The judge was beaming like a full moon with gray tufts of hair above its ears. "You'd think Bedlam had broken loose. They're yelling for you."

"He Spent Over $25 One Night."
graveled, flower-lined path which led to the works' entrance.
"I thought he might be here. We've been—er—shopping, and were going by, so I thought I would run in and have a word with him."

Even Mrs. Spotswood did not stop thus early in the morning, save for groceries; moreover, she did not wear her best black silk dress when she went shopping for her groceries, and the shopping district occupied the region farthest from the works upon the other side of her own home—but these things did not matter.

Then, as she saw Broadway's attention wavering, and that Clara was endeavoring to hold it long enough to ask for Wallace, she turned beamingly to him, although behind the beam there was a genuine anxiety. "Anything new, Broadway?"

Clara's courage had augmented by that time, and she gave him insufficient time to frame an answer, so Mrs. Spotswood went to Josie, and, as Broadway answered questions about Wallace, assuming Clara that he'd be there before long, out of the corner of his eye he could make certain that Josie was explaining things to Mrs. Spotswood. He rather thought and hoped that she was explaining them with real enthusiasm.

Clara was shyly excited over Wallace, and took full advantage of this chance to talk of him with his best friend. The long standing of her friendship for Broadway made her feel at liberty to gossip freely.
"I think Mr. Wallace is an awfully nice fellow," she said gravely.
"Do you really?" Broadway smiled at her although he bitterly resented her intrusion on his talk with Josie. "I'll tell him you said that," he gaily threatened.

"He is," she stated positively. "He ordered ice cream twice last night. A reminiscent hunger came into his eyes. 'Bought me a box of chocolates, too.'"

"Oh, he doesn't care what he does with his money." Broadway's manner indicated that asking twice for ice cream and the purchase of a box of chocolates represented to his mind the extreme insanity of spendo-mania.
"Doesn't he?" she asked, her tone indicating that delightful horror which unmarried ladies feel at hearing of the exploits of equally unmarried, possibly eligible young men.
"No," said Broadway, with the air of one revealing something at once horrible and fascinating. "He spent over twenty-five dollars one night."
His audience was as vividly impressed as any speaker could have wished. "He must have just thrown it away!"
"Why?"
But the mad tale of Wallace's expenditures was never told. The conversation was at this point interrupted by the sound of cheers in the great workrooms at the back.

broader. Come out and let them see you."
Broadway was in a state of panic, of blue funk, of sheer, unspeakable fright. He ducked and looked about as if endeavoring to find that avenue through which escape would be easiest. "No; not now, please," he begged pitifully.
They might have let it go at that had not the cheering within the works broken out afresh.
"Listen to that," the judge adjured him, and urged him with a happy hand upon his elbow.
His wife went to his assistance. "Oh, do go out and say something, Broadway!"
"Yes," the judge insisted, "come and make a speech."
"I can't say anything," said the miserable and frightened Broadway. "I never made a speech in my life!"
Josie, smiling gently, turned from them. When again she faced them she held in her hand the paper she had thrust so recently into that sacred, secret place. "Read this to them," she suggested.

He took it, but he did not see whence it had been extracted, although Mrs. Spotswood did. The eyes of matrons of her age are sympathetically attuned to signs of this sort, seeing them when others miss them. She smiled at Josie, Josie caught her eye and blushed furiously.

"He was around here early in the morning," answered the wife, "but I don't know where he is now."
The stout man in the fourth row was attentively following the pastor's sermon.
"Let us, then," said the exhorter, "break the bonds of custom and throw off the shackles of self, and acknowledge our debt to life's fundamental lessons. Let us deduct from the year's balance sheet those obligations which we are morally bound to assume."
At this point the stout man suddenly chuckled and slapped his leg with considerable force. After the sermon he was overtaken by the pastor.
"You seemed greatly pleased with one section of the sermon," he said.

"Yes," replied the stout man, "what you said reminded me of a ripping new scheme for beating the income tax."
